Waple Family Proud Habitat Homeowners

Dessi Waple's dream was to have a home that she could pass on to her son, Tylan. She moved frequently when she was growing up, and she wanted her son, now 10, to have established roots.

Her dream came true in June.

"They say it takes a village to raise a child and I hope the Habitat Village, from the staff to the volunteers and everyone who donated to my home, realize that you have helped me develop values and the feeling of stability and security with my son," Waple said.

Her home was sponsored by Thrivent Builds/Lutherans for Habitat, their sixth home they've built together as partners in the last four years and the 20th for the Lutherans.

Shadewood Place in Full Swing

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville broke ground on its newest development, Shadewood Place, in June and had 12 homes underway by the end of October. The development, located at the corner of Shadewood and Sweetser avenues, will be a mixed-income neighborhood with 19 Habitat homes and up to four market-rate homes built by Bussing Construction.

Sponsors of the homes include the City of Evansville, Catholics for Habitat, Crossroads Christian Church, Old National Bank, Larry Dunigan/Holiday Management, the Women Build, Mike and Hope Staubitz/Staubitz Charitable Trust, an anonymous donor, young Evansville leaders, Indiana University alumni and a group of United Church of Christ and Disciples of Christ churches.

Shadewood Place is part of the overall Glenwood Community Development Initiative, an effort among many partners to revitalize the Glenwood neighborhood. The partners have been meeting for two years to map strategies to improve the area, conducting focus groups and holding community discussions, and have developed six priority areas to guide their activities – Housing and Infrastructure, Education, Clean and Green, Safety, Business and Commerce and Health and Wellness. In addition to Shadewood Place, the partners also planted a community garden, and the Glenwood Leadership Academy opened this year as a K-8 school. Plans now include bringing the city's greenway path in front of the school.

"This transformation takes a lot of work and a lot of collaboration," Evansville

Gearing Up in Glenwood

Letter from the Executive Director

Dear Friends,

We are wrapping up another successful building year with 25 families served in calendar year 2010. We have also been learning much about building sustainable and healthy communities as we work with collaborative partners in the Glenwood Community Development Initiative.

We and our partners have accomplished much in Glenwood this year. In addition to the 25 families we've served, Habitat has also secured building sites for 2011, and the first Bussing Construction market-rate home is underway.

Other improvements include infrastructure work along Sweetser, built according to the improved design to accommodate the Greenway; demolition work at Caldwell homes; and renovations at the Glenwood Leadership Academy.

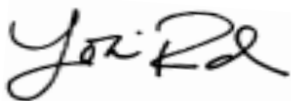

In addition to this capital investment, the Welborn Baptist Foundation has secured funding to improve access to healthy foods, Evansville Vanderburgh School Corporation created a position to support community engagement and resident leadership development, and the Vanderburgh Community Foundation is funding leadership and community development training for Glenwood residents.

In preparation for 2011, Habitat continues to approve families for homeownership and cultivate house sponsors for at least 20 new homes. Habitat is also exploring a homeowner-occupied rehabbing ministry to further our mission of eliminating substandard housing and building communities. We've learned from our work in Glenwood that existing homeowners, the most stable population of any neighborhood, need assistance. If we are to fulfill our mission of eliminating poverty housing, Habitat must seize new funding opportunities and embrace existing homeowners.

The Board of Directors and I will work diligently to attract new financial and human resources (donors and volunteers) to implement a homeowner-occupied rehab program in the Glenwood community above and beyond our new construction there. As in all new endeavors, we trust God will be walking before us.

Thank you for your continued support and trust!

In Christian Partnership,

Lori Reed
Executive Director

ment in an area plagued by gunfire and drug activity. She's safe now, and Tylan recently had 10 of his buddies over for a sleepover.

"My words of gratitude will never capture and express how deeply thankful and grateful I am to the Habitat program and to each and every person involved," Waple said. "Habitat is a blessing to my son and me. It has shown both of us the outcome of patience, faith, hard work and dedication as we now have a home that we worked so very hard for and sacrificed for, a home we will continue working hard for and taking pride in."

To be eligible, families must have a need, they must be willing to contribute 300 hours of sweat equity, and they must have the ability to pay their mortgage, based on a 25-year, no interest loan. Their mortgage payments are typically about $275 a month, which is what Waple is now paying.

She and Tylan also have plans for his room — an electric train shelved high above his bed.

"His favorite color is blue, and he's hinting at painting his room that color," Waple said.

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville has many more families waiting to be paired with a sponsor. For more information, please contact Sr. Jane Michele McClure, development director, at (812) 423-5623 or jmccclure@evansvillehabitat.org.

Homes started going up in Shadewood Place in June and are expected to be completed sometime next year. When finished, there will be 19 Habitat homes and up to four market-rate homes built by Bussing Construction.

Mayor Jonathan Weinzapfel said during the groundbreaking. "It's not just the city; it's not just Habitat; it's not just the neighborhood, or private donors or the school corporation — it's everybody working in collaboration to make this possible."

Habitat recently purchased several parcels of property along Riverside Drive in the Glenwood area and will hold them for partners in the initiative who are interested in economic development. The area is a blighted commercial district that several people working on the Business and Commerce team have expressed interest in redeveloping.

Habitat Receives Community Foundation Grant for Glenwood Leadership Training

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville received a $20,000 Breaking the Cycle grant from the Vanderburgh Community Foundation during its annual Spirit of Giving lunch on Sept. 16. The funding will provide leadership and community development training to residents of the Glenwood neighborhood in an effort to mobilize the community around the Glenwood Community Development Initiative. The proposal was a joint effort among Habitat, the Evansville Vanderburgh School Corporation and Aurora.

Additionally, 99 percent of students at the Glenwood Leadership Academy are eligible for free or reduced lunch.

The goal of the initiative is to create affordable housing, decrease transient rates among Glenwood residents and increase student achievement and attendance rates. Habitat began building in its newest development, Shadewood Place, and the school corporation opened the Glenwood Leadership Academy as a K-8 facility this year. A community mobilizer recently joined its staff to reach out to families in the neighborhood, including residents identified as proponents of the overall neighborhood stabilization initiative.

The Breaking the Cycle grant will provide community development and leadership training for those residents and will further advance the overall initiative.

“Habitat and our partners have accomplished a great deal in the few short years we have been working on this initiative,” said Lori Reed, Habitat’s executive director. “But one thing that has been missing is the community mobilization and training piece. This funding will help us to fill that need.”

The Glenwood Initiative is a comprehensive effort among many partners to revitalize the neighborhood, identified by the Evansville Department of Metropolitan Development as an area of need. Of the approximately 600 structures in that area, about one third are abandoned and another third are rental properties of which many are in need of repair.

Habitat Revitalizing Communities

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville has been selected as one of 163 affiliates nationwide — and the only one in Indiana — to participate in a national effort to revitalize neighborhoods. Habitat for Humanity International’s Neighborhood Revitalization Initiative focuses on improving housing conditions while partnering with other community organizations to provide services that enhance the overall quality of life across struggling neighborhoods.

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville was selected to participate in this initiative based in part on its collaborative efforts to revitalize the Glenwood neighborhood. The national initiative calls for an even broader reach, however, including rehabilitating existing structures and measuring successes in a more consistent manner.

“If we are going to help families thrive in healthy neighborhoods, we have to direct some significant efforts into healing America’s troubled communities,” said Jonathan Reckford, CEO of Habitat for Humanity International. “These affiliates will work together to develop strategies and create strong networks that can be used to address individual neighborhood issues.”

As part of the first phase, affiliates will receive training and guidance on how to revitalize communities through a variety of housing solutions and community development efforts. Habitat for Humanity of Evansville is ahead of the curve in many of these efforts, however, including the community outreach it did in the Glenwood area to ensure the voices of residents were heard.

Results from the initial phase of the national efforts will be used to develop policies and structures that can be replicated elsewhere.

“The national initiative has reaffirmed our commitment to the work we’re doing in Glenwood,” said Lori Reed, executive director of Habitat for Humanity of Evansville. “It has also accelerated consideration of opportunistically mobilizing resources to address the needs of existing homeowners in order to further our mission of eliminating substandard housing and building communities.”

Cans for Habitat

Clayton’s Cleaners and Golden Corral are no longer drop-off sites for aluminum cans donated to Habitat for Humanity of Evansville. If you would like to donate your aluminum cans, please take them directly to Tri-State Resource Recovery at the corner of Reed and Morgan avenues near Bosse Field.

Since the Cans for Habitat program began in 1999, more than $106,000 has been raised to help build simple, decent homes for families in need.

Tri-State Resource Recovery is open from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Just look for the bright orange dumpsters!

Thanks for your cans!

Donors Recognized During Annual Dinner

Accepting the award for the City of Evansville were Jane Reel (left), deputy director of the Department of Metropolitan Development, and Dr. Dan Adams (center), city council member. Also pictured are families Ebony Roach, Amitra Merriweather and Linda Bruce.

Accepting for Crossroads Christian Church were Dan Lahay (center) and Ron and Carol Cates.

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville recognized its major donors, house sponsors and in-kind contributors during its Donor Recognition Dinner Oct. 12 at St. Mary's Manor Auditorium. The event was marked by three Neighborhood Revitalization Awards presented to the City of Evansville, First Federal Savings Bank (FFSB) and the Federal Home Loan Bank of Indianapolis (FHLBI), and the Bobbie Hoy Award for Faith-Based Service presented to Crossroads Christian Church.

"When I look out and see all of you who so generously help Habitat for Humanity of Evansville build simple, decent housing, I want to assure you that you are on the right track with your priorities," said Shelley Kirk, anchorwoman for NEWS25 who emceed the event.

The City of Evansville received its award because of its substantial financial contribution to Habitat's newest development, Shadewood Place, at the corner of Sweetser and Shadewood avenues. It gave $550,000 to build five homes and acquire and prepare properties in the Glenwood neighborhood. City Councilman Dr. Dan Adams and Jane Reel, deputy director of the Department of Metropolitan Development, accepted the award.

Monica Stinchfield, senior vice-president of FFSB and Habitat board member, accepted the Neighborhood Revitalization Awards for her institution and FHLBI. Through these institutions, Habitat received a $285,000 Affordable Housing Grant last year to help build 19 homes in Shadewood. Habitat also received funding from the Neighborhood Impact Program (NIP) and Homeownership Opportunities Program (HOP) to help in the revitalization efforts of Glenwood. Since 1993, they have given more than $1.1 million.

Join Habitat for Humanity of Evansville on a Mission Trip to Botswana, Africa!

Gain experiences of a lifetime while building Habitat homes in Botswana, Africa! In July 2011, Habitat for Humanity of Evansville will lead a group of 15 volunteers to Botswana where we will stay for two weeks building homes and connecting with the culture.

Botswana

Botswana is one of Africa's most politically stable countries, and its diamond reserves have made a huge impact on the country's income. Half of the population, however, still struggles to survive on less than $2 a day. One of the most vulnerable groups is women. One-third of all families are headed by females, and 60 percent of women live in extreme poverty.

In addition, the loss of lives through HIV leads to an increase in the number of child-headed households that are often left without proper financial means to support themselves or maintain existing houses.

With so many people living in poverty, substandard housing is an overwhelming challenge. Habitat for Humanity of Botswana has been operating since 1991. Since then, it has built about 1,750 homes and sold them to families at no interest. An estimated 12,000 newly constructed homes a year are needed, however, to provide for the need.

Cost for this trip will be $1,600 per person, which includes all in-country meals, lodging and transportation to and from the work site. This does not include air fare or optional safari. If you're interested in joining the group or sponsoring someone, call Lydia Johnson, community relations director, at (812) 423-5623.

Facts about Botswana

Location: Southern Africa, north of South Africa

Population: 1.8 million

Languages: English, Setswana

Climate: Semi Arid; warm winters (April-Sept.) and hot summers (Oct.-March)

Religions: Christianity, indigenous beliefs

Government: Parliamentary republic

Economy: Main exports are diamonds, copper, nickel, beef

More Contributions to Cars For Homes

Anne Nicholson and Jack and Dorothy Stone have become Habitat for Humanity of Evansville's latest Cars for Homes donors. They had vehicles they no longer needed, and now the money from the sale of their vehicles through the Cars for Homes program will help build houses in Evansville.

If you have any vehicle – a car, truck, RV, boat, plane, farm or construction equipment – that you no longer need or want, call toll-free (877) 277-4344 or visit carsforhomes.org to donate to this worthwhile program.

Habitat for Humanity International will assist you in the donation process and make sure that Habitat for Humanity of Evansville (HFHE) receives the net proceeds after the transaction is processed. HFHE receives 80 percent of the net cost of the sale of the vehicle.

Call Michael Erwin, HFHE development officer, at (812) 423-5623, ext. 36, to find out how to donate your vehicle to this program.

Volunteers Wanted!

Have you ever wondered what it's like to work on a Habitat house? Now's your chance to find out.

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville is looking for volunteers to join its regular crew. These guys and gals work from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. every Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday. They put up walls, install siding and hang doors – just about everything it takes to build a home.

No construction experience is needed as we have trained volunteers and construction staff who will guide you.

If you're interested in meeting new friends and building homes for families in need, please call Alaina Bartley, volunteer coordinator, at (812) 423-5623.

Women Build Dedicated

Amanda Bratcher is looking forward to spending Christmas as a homeowner. On Oct. 20, she and her 5-year-old daughter, Maddie, dedicated their new Habitat home, underwritten by Lowe's and built by local women.

"We'll be able to spend our first Christmas in a home that we not only own now but that we helped build," Bratcher said.

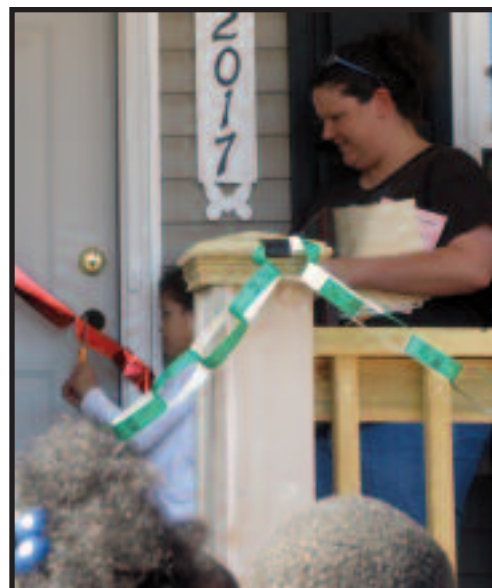

The home, located in Habitat's Shadewood Place, was the fifth Women Build that Habitat for Humanity of Evansville has built. More than 300 women participated in the build, with Lowe's providing two training sessions and a $5,000 contribution to help area women get started.

"God has asked us to give back of our talents, treasures and time, and every woman who helped us make this a reality did just that," said Vicki Hanni, chair of the resource development committee.

The Women Build was dedicated to Emilyann Combs Fowler, a teacher, artist and community volunteer who passed away in December 2009. Her husband, Jim Fowler, continues to volunteer with the ministry.

Maddie's kindergarten classmates from the Glenwood Leadership Academy joined her for the dedication. In addition, Jeff Whiteside, president of the Vectren foundation, presented a check for $2,500 to honor the commitment of Vectren volunteers who participated in the build.

During the groundbreaking on Sept. 2 Christina Ryan, CEO of The Women's Hospital, presented a check for $5,000. She also led two teams of volunteers during construction.

Maddie cuts the ribbon on her new home while her mother, Amanda Bratcher, watches.

Michael Erwin Joins Habitat for Humanity of Evansville

Michael Erwin

Michael Erwin joined the staff at Habitat for Humanity of Evansville in August as development officer. He has a background in Christian ministry, serving congregations in Arkansas and Kentucky and was most recently associate pastor at Bethel United Church of Christ in Evansville. He obtained his master's degree from Louisville Presbyterian Seminary.

Erwin will work with the Benefactors Build, Cars for Homes and many other programs that support Habitat's homebuilding ministry. To learn more about how you can help families obtain affordable and decent homes, please call him at (812) 423-5623 or you may email him at merwin@evansvillehabitat.org.

Benefactors Builds Help Brodie and McCants Families

When Danett Brodie learned her new Habitat home would be built in the Glenwood neighborhood, one of the oldest areas in Evansville, she was excited. It's where she grew up, and she wanted to raise her children there.

"This is one of the best days of my life," Brodie said on the day she dedicated her home. "I have big plans for my house."

Brodie's home was sponsored by the Benefactors Build, an annual program that pools contributions to build houses for Habitat partner families. Since the program began in 2007, five homes have been built.

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville built two homes through this program in 2010, one with Brodie and one with Lakeashia McCants.

"Everybody deserves to have simple, decent housing," said Fran Vix, who will chair the Benefactors Build next year along with her husband, Vernon Vix. "Everyone pulling their gifts together can help a family realize their dream of having a home."

Information will go out soon about how you can join them in their efforts to help more families like Brodie and McCants obtain simple, decent homes. For more information, contact Michael Erwin, Habitat's development officer, at (812) 423-5623 or merwin@evansvillehabitat.org.

Who We Are

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville is a non-profit Christian ministry whose mission is to build and sell simple, decent houses to hardworking families in partnership with individuals, churches, businesses, and civic organizations who share our vision.

What We Do

Habitat for Humanity of Evansville works with families whose income is less than 60 per cent of the area's median household income. To qualify for homeownership, a family must demonstrate a need for housing; have the ability to repay a 25-year, zero-interest mortgage; contribute 300 hours of sweat equity to build their own home and help other families build theirs, and attend homeownership classes to learn skills in home maintenance and financial management. No-profit loans and houses built principally by volunteer labor make mortgage payments affordable for low-income families.

Where We Work

Founded in 1984, Habitat for Humanity of Evansville currently serves families in Vanderburgh and Posey Counties. A tithing program enables Habitat for Humanity of Evansville to contribute to homebuilding in Jordan and Botswana (in southern Africa).

How It Works

Charitable contributions from individuals, churches, businesses and civic organizations provide the upfront cost of building homes. These contributions — combined with homeowner mortgage payments — create a revenue stream that enables Habitat to build more houses and serve more families.
